CHAPTER I.

A Speck in the Sky

IT was Marta who first saw the speck in the sky. Her outery and her bound from her seat at the teatable brought her mother and Colonel Westerling after her onto the lawn, where they became motionless figures, screening their eyes with their hands. The newest and most wonderful thing in the world at the time was this speck appearing above the irregular horizon of the Brown range, in view of a landscape that centuries of civilization had fertilized and cultivated and formed.

At the base of the range ran a line of white stone posts, placed by international commissions of surveyors to the nicety of an inch's variation. In the very direction of the speck's flight a spur of foot-hills extended into the plain that stretched away to the Gray range, distinct at the distance of thirty miles in the bright afternoon light. Faithful to their part in refusing to climb, the white posts circled around the spur, hugging the levels.

In the lap of the spur was La Tir, the old town, and on the other side of the boundary lay South La Tir, the new town. Through both ran the dusty ribbon of a road, drawn straight across the plain and over the glistening thread of a river. On its way to the pass of the Brown range it skirted the garden of the Gallands, which rose in terraces to a seventeenth-century house overlooking the old town from its outskirts. They were such a town, such a road, such a landscape as you may have seen on many European frontiers. The Christian people who lived in the region were like the Christian people you know if you look for the realities of human nature under the surface differences of language and habits.

TOWER STILL INTACT

Beyond the house rose the ruins of a castle, its tower still intact. Marta always referred to the castle as the baron; for in her girlhood she had a way of personifying all inanimate things. If the castle walls were covered with hoar frost, she said that the baron was shivering; if the wind tore around the tower, she said that the baron was groaning over the

BRAVES BATTLE TO GET BIG LEAD OVER GIANTS

By NICK FLATLEY.

Dick Rudolph and Lefty Tyler, two of the famous Big Three, take up the cudgels in the great Brave uplift movement this afternoon. The pair worked Monday, and consequently will be ready to show at their best in the double-header which confronts the Climbers.

That lead is now a matter of a game and a half. No matter what happens to the Braves today, the worst they can get is a shade behind the Giants. To have such a thing happen, Stallings and company

THIEVES GET $1,000 IN GEMS

The store of the Kimball Jewelry Company at No. 248 Washington street was burglarized during the night and robbed of $1,000 worth of watches, rings and other jewelry. The break was discovered when Lillian Bernstein, a clerk, arrived to open the store today.

The burglars did not touch the safe, which contained jewelry valued at more than $2,000. They entered the store by smashing a transom over the front door. The store is only a few doors from State street.

Nothing was known of the robbery until Miss Bernstein arrived to open the establishment for the day's business. She found the place had been ransacked and scores of rings, watches and other articles were missing from their places in racks and show cases.

Kallan Bernstein, the proprietor, reached the store a few minutes later. The police were notified and Special Officer Michael Trayers of the Court Square Station began an investigation. The burglars left no clew to their identity.

Talk of Peace Comes From All Quarters

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—"I cannot state that peace is certain, but important news from Washington may be looked for within a very short time."

The foregoing statement was made to the Boston AMERICAN today by a former member of the American diplomatic corps.

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Sept. 10.—Financiers who control the money marts of the world are attempting to bring a speedy end to the European war. They are exerting pressure in all the capitals. Whether they will be successful is still problematical, but semi-official reports have been current here for two days that Germany is willing to listen, in the near future, to proposals for mediation, providing her opponents would first accept such proposals.

It can be stated that the German position is this:

The offensive campaign against the French and British has been successful; the defensive campaign in eastern Prussia, where no big offensive move had been planned, was successful in repelling the Russians, and German troops have been successful in their invasion of Russian Poland. Therefore Germany feels that her position is such that Great Britain, France and Russia should be the first approached with mediatory proposals.

When they have acted on such proposals, Germany will decide what course she will follow. The declaration made at the beginning of the war that Germany had been forced to defend herself is constantly reiterated here.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 10.—Austria will sue for peace as a result of the terrific defeats she has suffered in Galicia, according to semi-official reports in circulation here today. It is said that the Austro-Hungarian government is disgruntled over Germany's failure to send more troops into Galicia, and, threatened with internal troubles, will seek the best terms possible.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Chronicle today sent the following dispatch:

"In Russian and foreign diplomatic circles it is believed that Austria will sue for peace within a fortnight as the only

British Hero of the Hour

GEN. SMITH-DORRIEN

General Smith-Dorrien is the war hero of the hour, according to London dispatches. His praises are on every British officer's tongue. The present offensive of the allies is admittedly due to his efforts. With his small corps he [illegible] days withstood an overwhelming force of Germans, making possible the saving of the entire left wing of the allied army.

Sir John French pays him glorious tribute, saying that "unless a commander of rare and unusual coolness and determination had been present to conduct personally the operation, the saving of the whole left wing would have been impossible."

It is stated that Dorrien's troops were almost completely surrounded by Germans five times their number, but that they held their positions until the entire left wing of the allies succeeded in reaching new positions selected and were fully intrenched.

150,000 COLONIALS THROUGH CANADA

That the Russian advance on Berlin has become the most serious matter that confronts the Kaiser is indicated by dispatches from Petrograd and Vienna.

A dispatch from the Russian capital says:

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd states that the Austrians have evacuated Cracow, their strongest post in Galicia. This will clear the way for the Russian march on Berlin.

An earlier dispatch out of Vienna via Rome and London reads:

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Rome correspondent of the Echange Telegraph Company reports that dispatches received at the Italain capital from Vienna state that the advance guard of the Russian centre is marching toward Berlin, that the Russians have invaded Silesia and that the capture of Breslau is imminent.

(Official announcements made in Perograd say nothing as to an invasion of Silesia.)

These dispatches are given further color by the following, which tells of the enormous losses sustained by the main Austrian army:

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A correspondent of the Echange Telegraph Company sends the following from Rome:

"A message from Vienna states it is officially admitted there that Archduke Frederick lost 120,000 men in the recent Galician battldes, or one-fourth of his entire command."

An indication of what the kaiser is doing to stay the progress of the Russian is suggested in this dispatch:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—The Novoe Vremyas war expert today concludes his article by stating that "because of Russia's successes in East Prussia and Galicia the Germans have been compelled to withdraw 300,000 men from France."

GERMANS QUIT NORTHERN FRANCE.

An official statement issued from the French hospital shortly after noon (Boston time) declares that the Germans have evacuated th centire northern end of France.

It remains to be seen whether these troops were forced out by the French or removed by the Kaiser to strengthen his forces against the Russians.

To offset the Russian menace the Kaiser has also sent his Baltic fleet against the Russian coast.

The above information is conveyed in the following dispatch:

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 10.—Two Swedish captains who brought their ships into port today reported that they had seen a German fleet of thirty-one battleships, cruisers and destroyers steaming east in the Gulf of Bothnia.

This news indicates that the Germans intend to attack the coast towns of Finland, which lie along the Gulf of Bothnia.

Opening eastward from the lower part of the Gulf of Bithnia is the Gulf of Finland, whose extreme eastern waters wash the shores of Petrograd. While the Gulf of Finland is presumably mined and also defended by Russian forts and ships, the presence of the Kaiser's fleet anywhere in northern Baltic waters is of immediate concern to the Czar.

War news near home is conveyed in the following:

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—One hundred and fifty thousand troops from India and Australia have been passing through Canada for the past week, according to officers and passengers on the liner Stephano, which arrived from St. Johns today. They say that the Canadian Pacific Railroad has been using all its cars to transport these troops, who are to be lande dat Ostend.

The British War Office confirms earlier reports of the success of the allies in France in this brief but comprehensive statement:

LONDON, Sept. 10.—An official statement issued this afternoon says: "The enemy has been driven back all along the line. The battle continued Wednesday. Sir John French reports that the First Corp has buried 200 German dead and taken twelve Maxim guns. The Germans suffered heavily. Hundreds were captured. They are said to be exhausted. The British have crossed the Marne in a northerly direction."

This official statement is in line with previous statements from the French War Office, saying that the German right wing had been driven back across the River Marne. Now it appears that the British troops on the allies' front have followed up their advantage, crossed the river in pursuit and presumably are harrassing the German right.

Paris guards the Louvre and its priceless art works from German airship bombs, thus:

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The most valuable piceures in the Louvre have been removed. The bric-a-brac has been put in vaults. A double roof has been built on the Louvre, all to save the art treasures, especially from bomb-dropping Seppelins.

Reports about the fortress of Maubeuge, claimed to have been captured by the Germans, are in curious contradiction. Germany yesterday declared it had taken Maubeuge, with 40,000 troops and 400 cannon. The French declare that the place still holds out. But Germany sticks to its original statement, as shown by this dispatch:

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—Official announcement was made today that the German troops released from the operations around Maubeuge by the fall of that fortress had been sent to join the forces of General Von Kluk.

The French war office now claims advances in Alsace, thus:

BORDEAUX, Sept. 10.—An official statement from the War Office says that the French troops, invading Alsace, are driving the Germans back to the Rhine and now hold ground as far as Bollweiter and Thann. The allies, the statement adds, are on the offensive. The Germans, even with reinforcements from the Crown Prince's army, are on the defensive.

TURN GERMAN LEFT.

Thann is just northwest of Mulhausen in lower Alsace, and Bollweiter is a few miles northeast of Thann. This would indicate that the French right, returning to the Alsatian territory it once invaded, then abandoned, has turned the extreme German left and is forcing it back on German soil.

Early statements by the French War Office in Paris today summarized the titanic struggle between the allies and Germans thus:

There is a main battle line 163 miles long, stretching eastward from Paris. The right wing of the invading Germans is still being driven back by the fierce thrusts of the allies. In the centre—which occupies sixty-three miles of the main line—the concentrated German strength is battling furiously to hold its ground. Along the French right, extending to the German frontier, the fighting is at long range with artillery, though some skirmishing forces are in combat. The above is conveyed in the following dispatch:

FIGHT TO HOLD CENTRE.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—General Gallieni, the Paris military governor, issued a statement today saying that the right wing of the German army of invasion is still retreating, that the Germans are making a desperate stand at the centre to hold their positions and that the rest of the battle front shows skirmishing, artillery duelling and manoeuvring.

The French War Office declares the allies' situation is satisfactory, that the Germans attacked the French lines along the Ourcq River, northeast of Paris, but were driven back and lost two standards. The government says the German front is twenty-five miles farther back from Paris than it was five days ago.

Coincident with the news that the German right wing has been driven back, the Germans retreating twenty-five miles across the Marne, come dispatches stating that reinforcements are being rushed to the Germans from their forces in Belgium. One dispatch reads:

GERMANS ARE REINFORCED.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A Reuter's dispatch from Ostend tells of the advance into France of German reinforcements, estimated at 60,000. The invaders are moving in three columns.

Another setback for the Germans is unofficially reported, thus:

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The Boston AMERICAN'S correspondent at Bordeaux reports that Luneville was evacuated September 6 by the Germans, who also abandoned the surrounding heights.

Luneville is on the Moselle, twenty-five miles southeast of Nancy, which was reported to be besieged by the Germans a few days ago, with the Kaiser not far off directing the operation.

The report of its evacuation comes simultaneously with the official report that the French right is advancing in that direction, driving back the German left after fierce resistance. The report adds no attempt is being made by the enemy to capture Nancy's positions.

This, with the report that the British have driven the enemy back twenty-five miles, and have crossed the Marne in pursuit of them, is held to justify the view held by all military experts that the situation is now very favorable for the allies.

Germans Evacuate Northern France

French Coat of Arms.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—It was officially announced today that all of northern France has been evacuated by the Germans with the exception of small parties of Uhlans, who have been entrusted with the difficult task of guarding communications.

[By all of "northern France" is probably meant the departments of the Somme and Pas-de-Calais and part of the Nord.]

"The situation is much improved," says the statement.

"The Uhlans are gradually being driven eastward.

"Many emigrants whose villages are no longer threatened are returning home. Traffic has been partially resumed on the northern railway.

"Reconnaissance parties found the neighborhood clear of the enemy and the ground strewn with the putrefying bodies of dead horses."

POPE TO ISSUE AN APPEAL FOR PEACE

means of avoiding a complete break-up of the empire, owing to rapidly growing internal troubles."

ROME, Sept. 10.—The forthcoming Papal Encyclical, the issue of which has been purposely delayed pending the result of a decisive battle, will contain an appeal for peace.

Pope Benedict has approached Austria and Germany through their envoys here, and they informed the pontiff that they are favorably disposed to second his efforts for peace.

The Czar is understood to be prepared to submit the Pope's offer to the consideration of England and Austria. Pope Benedict hopes that his appeal may lead to an armistice which would be an prelude of peace.

Why Cadum is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This, according to a very distinguished New York physician, seems to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the air. This covering consists of petrolatum and white wax, which Cadum contains. Two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best known remedies for Eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating Eczema. Cadum costs 10c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

Kaiser's Protest to President Wilson

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The following is the text of Emperor William's message to President Wilson, under date of September 4, protesting against the alleged use of dum-dum bullets on the part of the allies, as telegraphed to the Daily Mail by its Rotterdam correspondent:

"I consider it my duty, sir, to inform you as the most notable representative of the principles of humanity, that, after the capture of the French fort of Longwy, my troops found in that place thousands of dum-dum bullets which had been manufactured in special works by the French government. Such bullets were not only on French killed and wounded soldiers and on French prisoners, but also on English troops. You know what terrible wounds and awful suffering are caused by these bullets, and that their use is strictly forbidden by the generally recognized rules of international warfare.

"I solemnly protest to you against the way in which this war is being waged by our opponents, whose methods are making it one of the most barbarous in history. Besides the use of these awful weapons, the Belgian government has openly incited the civil population to participate in the fighting, and has for a long time carefully organized their resistance. The cruelties practiced in this guerilla warfare, even by women and priests toward wounded soldiers and doctors and hospital nurses are such that eventually my generals were compelled to adopt the strongest measures to punish the guilty and frighten the bloodthirsty population from continuing their shameful deeds.

"Some villages and even the old town of Louvain, with the exception of its beautiful town hall (Hotel de Ville) had to be destroyed for the protection of my troops.

"My heart bleeds when I see such measures inevitable, and when I think of the many innocent people who have lost their homes and property as the result of the misdeeds of the guilty.

"(Signed) WILHELM I."

Sidelights on the War

BIG EAST INDIAN SUPPORT.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—It is stated here that 700 rulers of the native States of India have rallied to the defence of the Empire.

LONDON AIR PATROL.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Admiralty has announced that an airship will hereafter cruise over London night and day, and warns the people not to shoot at it.

POSTPONE MOURNING.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—Public sentiment here forbids ostentatious mourning for those lost in battle. Women who weep or wear black in public are advised to postpone such public signs of sorrow till after the war.

HEAD AS SOUVENIR.

ST. MALO, France, Sept. 10.—An Algerian, wounded and brought here, had a German's head in his knapsack as a treasured souvenir, and was furious at parting with it.

TO REWRITE MESSAGES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—All wireless messages received at the Tuckerton station will be rewritten by the navy officers in charge, the sense not being altered, so as to prevent the working of any secret "plain language code" in the messages.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 10. — President Poincare has called all Frenchmen previously exempted from military service on the ground of defective health to undergo a further medical examination. Those found fit will be drafted.

PAY SOLDIERS' WIVES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Fifteen cents a day will be paid by Belgium to every Belgian woman in America whose husband is with the Belgian army, and five cents for each child.

SEES TOY EMBARGO.

Boston children, as well as the youngsters throughout the United States are likely to be disappointed by Santa Claus this Christmas, according to Julius I. Baer of Louis Wolf & Co., importers of dolls and toys, who has returned from the company's factories at Nuremberg. The war has caused the cessation of German toy manufacture.

DEATH PROPORTION SMALL.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 10. — The war office states that of every hundred men placed out of fighting only two are killed. The French wounded are numerous, but injuries are generally slight, attributed to poor German rifle fire.

EYES TROUBLE YOU?

TRY THIS SIMPLE RECEIPT.

We all know some home remedy for our minor troubles, and by the use of these remedies many a doctor's bill is saved and doubtless many a life.

How few know what to do when their eyes become tired and ache, or feel dry and inflamed from abuse and overuse? In the morning your eyes feel rough or sticky, or they trouble you when you read. What do you do? Most of us rush off and get glasses (perhaps at some cheap store where no skill is used in fitting our eyes), which we very often do not need at all. Thousands are wearing misfit or unnecessary glasses which they might better discard and other thousands can, with a little care, probably so strengthen their eyes that glasses might never be necessary. Here is a free receipt that may be relied upon to give comfort and to help the eyes of some people; it is harmless and has the enthusiastic endorsement of thousands who have used it:

5 Grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 Ounces Water.

Use as an eye wash night and morning, or oftener if possible. It makes most eyes feel fine, quickly allays irritation, brightens the eyes and sharpens the vision. Many who have used it no longer feel the need of glasses; many others have ceased to fear that they will soon be obliged to wear them. Get the Optona tablets from your nearest druggist and prepare the solution at your own home.

PEACE PLEA BY MISS MABEL BOARDMAN

WOMEN URGED TO HELP

Civic Leaders Endorse Plans for Big Peace Meeting on the Common Sunday

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary and active head of the Red Cross Society in America, appealed to all American women today to support the world peace movement inaugurated by William Randolph Hearst's newspapers.

"Peace lies in the hands of the people of this nation. Will yours be the hands to help bring it about?" is the appeal that Miss Boardman makes to American women through this newspaper.

Miss Boardman enrolled as a member of the world peace committee and wrote this message to the women of the nation:

By MABEL T. BOARDMAN.

Working as the Red Cross is to mitigate the sufferers of war, there comes over us the conviction that no emblem better symbolizes true peace than ours. It is the flag against which, by international agreement no weapon can be raised, no guns fired. It represents love for our fellowmen, and perfect peace must be built upon that foundation.

If our hearts are so filled with sorrow and with sympathy for the sick and wounded that there can be no room for anger or accusation, we will bring our own nation nearer the goal of that peace for which we long.

Oh, American women, do not the tortured hearts of our sister women appeal to us? Love them in their untold sorrow. Help them in their misery. And your prayers that peace again may dwell amid the shattered ruins of the home will not be left unanswered.

Let each remember that her own opinion is part of the great public opinion that makes for peace or war. Peace lies in the hands of the people of this nation. Will yours be the hands that help to bring it about?

India Aids England With 70,000 Troops

SIMLA, India (via London), Sept. 10.—That her East Indian dominion is contributing 70,000 troops and much treasure to the mother country for the war was announced by Baron Hardinge, Viceroy of India, at the opening capital here.

Peace Hymn to Be Sung at Meeting on Common

Among the hymns to be sung at the peace meeting on Boston Common next Sunday is the following, recommended by Superintendent Dyer to be used by the public school children of Boston:

"THE RALLYING CRY TO PEACE."
THE WORLD'S PEACE SONG, "DISARM!"

Loud cries the Past, from her dead fields of blood: DISARM!
The world of Peace, obedient to her Truth: DISARM!!!
The toilers of all lands with one accord:
The mothers of all lands in one grand word:
The children leading the New World's Brotherhood:
DISARM! DISARM!!
And all who men's life-blood as sacred hold.
And all who live for men and not their gold.
And the long, long future as her gates unfold:
DISARM! DISARM!!!
HALT, serried hosts!! Reverse the sword and lance!!!
ADVANCE! ADVANCE! White-bordered Flag ADVANCE!!!
White-bordered Flag of Liberty, ALL hail! All hail!
ADVANCE!! ADVANCE!! White-bordered Flag. ADVANCE!!!—

It is your peace meeting. Every one should be there and aid the cause. Church and civic leaders all endorse this united effort for peace. Mayor Curley will preside in the absence of the Rev. James L. Barton, Secretary of the Foreign Missions of the American Board of Missions in the Congregational Church. He will also make an address.

Other speakers will be Governor Walsh, Rabbi M. M. Eichler, Mrs. Maud Wood Park, Bishop John W. Hamilton, Albert G. Bryant of the World Peace Foundation, Dr. J. H. Dyer, superintendent of Boston Public Schools; Ignatius McNulty, president of the Boston Building Trades Council, and William Kehb, president of the Boston Central Labor Union.

OPERA SINGERS TO APPEAR.

The following opera singers have consented to sing at the meeting: Matia Rampal, soprano; Ernestine Gauthier, contralto; Giovanni Zerga, tenor; Edgar Littleton, basso. There will also be a band in attendance.

The meeting will be entirely in the interests of peace. Nothing of a controversial nature about what caused the war or what nation is to be censured in promoting it, will be allowed. The one note of peace will be struck all the way through.

PLEADS FOR PEACE.

Max Henry Newman of Boston is among those who today lent themselves to the World Peace Movement. He writes:

"Let us have peace—and that soon. Civilization is rocked to its founder by the torments of war. Is it not our duty to use our good offices in the interest of peace. Let us see to it that this outrage upon humanity may end."

Henry S. Haskins, secretary of the Massachusetts Peace Society, says:

"The peace meeting ought to be popular. Now is the time for us all to do a great deal of hard thinking on the peace problem; the problem of how war, such as is going on in Europe, can be prevented in the future.

"Sooner or later this war will come to an end, treaties of peace will be made and normal conditions resumed. Is this to be the 'world's last war' or simply one of the series of regularly recurring horrors and insanities?

"A great deal depends upon what is done at the close of this war. At this time there will be strong reaction against militarism which would mean an opportunity to substitute 'law' for 'war.'

"How are we going to use that opportunity?

"How can the world be so reorganized as to prevent another such conflagration?

"This meeting on the Common may help to throw some light upon this subject. Let us rally around peace and make it the one aim of civilized countries in the future."

Secretary E. H. Chandler of the Twentieth Century Club said:

"After reading so much about the horrors and cruelties of war, we are all prepared to attend a peace meeting on Boston Common. This is a movement I highly commend. Anything that will add to encourage peace and to instill it into the minds of the people, is always worthy of support. Let us show our colors on Sunday, September 13, on Boston Common.

"We are a peace loving people. Let Boston start a new effort to make peace a more real movement than it seems to have been in Europe. Newspapers will talk peace and keep talking it through public peace meetings I feel that we are heading toward peace."

HOW MODERN ARMIES MAINTAIN THEIR BASE

It is not recorded that Hannibal, when he marched from Africa around through Spain, France and Switzerland, down against the hosts of Rome, dragged supply trains and ammunition at the heels of his army. He "lived on the country" almost entirely. And other generals of later days were still able to do that till comparatively modern times.

There is no better illustration of how lack of adequate supplies may handicap an army than the various campaigns of General McClellan, in the Civil War. His Peninsular campaign was ruined by the withdrawal of troops, the failure of reinforcements, and the lack of supplies; and later, after his brilliant victories at South Mountain and Antietam, it was his lack of supplies again—particularly his lack of horses—that prevented his striking Lee's army a deadly blow.

With every increase in the size of armies, there has been a proportionate increase in the importance of the lines of supply. Likening an army to an individual—the head is the commanding general; the feet and arms are the troops—and the stomach and trunk are the lines of communication and supply. An army cut off from its base would ordinarily completely exhaust its food in two days, and if it had much fighting to do, would use up its ammunition in only a little longer.

LINE FRONT AND BASE.

The army's lines of communication link its fighting front with its base; and they serve to transport stores, food, reinforcements, ammunition, guns, orders, sick and wounded. The great weakness of the German army in France—experts concede—is its distance from any base of supplies. And a study of that army's situation gives an idea of the importance of the problem.

The army's fighting front ranges east and northeast from Paris. Its base of supplies is probably in the neighborhood of Aix-la-Chapelle.

That means that all supplies for the troops must travel the distance from Aix, via Liege and Namur, and down through northern France to the front. That is a matter of from 150 to 200 miles, according to what part of the German front is the destination.

By railroad, motor truck and teams, an endless supply of food, forage and war material is being transported over this route. Most people have seen a line of auto trucks carrying regular provisions from one nest to another. The loaded autos are racing in one direction—those without a burden hurrying backward to get a new load. It is much the same on the lines of communication of a great army.

The trains and the motor trucks—for it is upon the latter that the Germans army largely relies—carry food in enormous quantities—for the men and horses. The German ration is probably about three pounds per man daily. Assuming that there is an army of 250,000 men in the region just north of Paris, that means 750,000 pounds of food alone must be brought up daily—or 375 tons of food alone.

SUPPLIES THE GUNS.

Then there is forage for the horses. The horses, more readily than the soldiers, can live on the country. But huge quantities of hay and grain must be brought up for the horses.

Then gasoline is demanded for the motors and ammunition in enormous quantities must be supplied. When quick firing guns of the Hotchkiss type were invented, army men thought they would be useless because ammunition could not be supplied. But the efficiency of the guns demanded their use, and the supply department was forced to come up to the new demand. Quick-firing guns, magazine rifles and quick-firing field artillery call fo an immense amount of ammunition.

Troops must also be transported along the lines of communication; and the sick and wounded from the front, together with prisoners, must be hurried far to the rear where they will not impede the troops at the front.

Thus the tax upon the lines of communication is tremendous. Their importance also necessitates that a powerful force guard them at all times. In Belgium, now, where the German lines are exposed to a British, Russian and Belgian attack at Liege and Namur, immense forces of German troops must be left to guard weak spots in the line. The Germans have fortified Brussels and Liege and Namur for their own use, and it is probable than a fourth as many Germans are now in Belgium as are actually fighting at the front. In our War of the Rebellion, out of 100,000 troops, 20,000 were ordinarily diverted to such guard work, and the proportion is hardly less now than then.

The lines of communication are the arteries along which an army's life blood flows. If they are cut—the army dies.

Tomorrow's article will be on "How a Modern General Works."

HOLD RED CROSS SHIP BECAUSE OF GERMAN HELP

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The question raised by the British and French governments regarding the neutral status of the steamship Red Cross, which she carries Germans among her crew when she sails with surgeons, nurses and supplies for the battlefields of Europe has delayed, apparently indefinitely, the departure of the ship.

Her commander, Captain Arnistad Rust, U. S. N., retired, went to Washington and it was said that the purpose of his journey was to place the problem before Secretary Bryan.

The Red Cross, formerly the Hamburg-American liner Hamburg, was loaned to the American Red Cross by that line and had among her engine force, stewards and sailors a number of native Germans, who have taken out their first papers in the United States. It was reported that if the Red Cross organization sought to supplant these Germans with Americans and Spaniards the ship would be withdrawn from the organization's service.

An official of the line said that it was not likely that the Red Cross Society would displace the Germans without asking that line's permission, and that since no such request had yet been received, the officials of the line would not make any statement regarding the future movements of the ship.

PUPILS ON STRIKE IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, Sept. 10.—The school season has begun here with the strangest school strike ever recorded in New England. Twenty-three pupils of Miss Clara J. Wetherell, in the Hancock School, are staying away from school on orders from their parents, and say they will stay on strike until Miss Wetherell is removed.

The parents and children make these charges against Miss Wetherell:

That she uses slang, constantly telling the children to "cut it out" and to mind their own business.

That she makes fun of the clothing of the children.

That she makes fun of the children's names.

That she makes fun of the occupations of the children's parents.

All of these charges have been set forth in a petition to the School Board. President Eldon B. Keith of the board says a special meeting of the board will be held to consider the charges.

Miss Wetherell denies the truth of all the charges. She has been teaching thirteen years in the Brockton schools, three years in the Hancock School, where she has the ninth grade, and the rest of the time in various Brockton schools.

Miss Wetherell is principal of the school as well as in charge of the ninth grade.

The parents also charge favoritism. They say, for example, that last year Edith Skillings and Elsie Laya both had the same marks and average, yet the Skillings girl was not allowed to enter the high school while the Laya girl was promoted.

The war against Miss Wetherell began last year. Charges were sent to George S. Farley, superintendent of schools. The parents say they were tabled. The hearing by the school board asked for was not held.

Two weeks ago the parents began their war again on Miss Wetherell, passing about the petition asking for a hearing on the charges. An indignation meeting of the parents was held, resolutions were adopted and copies sent to Mayor Howard and members of the school board.

GRACE LARUE, who tells of farewell to Byron Chandler, former husband, on his way to war.

GRACE LARUE TELLS OF WAR AND CHANDLER

Among the refugees whom grim ravaged war has chased to the United States is Grace Larue, the musical comedy star who is appearing at Keith's this week.

Everybody in Boston remembers Grace Larue, who married Byron Chandler, the diminutive million dollar kid, and divorced him for cruel and abusive treatment.

Well, Miss Larue was singing in Cologne when the war broke out. She landed in the United States broke and if her agent in New York hadn't booked her instantly in vaudeville big time she might have been obliged to dispense with terrapin and caviar in favor of the meek and lowly bean. She admits it.

"It was terrible," explained the actress as she sat in her dressing room at Keith's all dressed up in a Harem costume she wore in a song called "My Tango Queen." "One night I was singing to a merry audience in Cologne. The next everything was shut up. I had to get across the Rhine in a rowboat and suffered all sorts of hardships before I got to London.

"If I hadn't just by luck had a few gold pieces among my German bank notes I could never have made it, for paper money became no good. In London I managed to get some of my German money changed through a friend by promising to refund to him if German money shouldn't equal the rate of exchange after the war is over.

"Who should turn up in London when I was waiting for a ship but Mr. Chandler, my ex-husband. He wrote me that he wanted to see me again and part friends, as he was going to join the Belgians and didn't know what might happen, so I saw him. He said he was going as a sort of war correspondent. Anyway, I forgave him, because we only live one life, and what's the use of being enemies?

"On the Olympic coming back the ship was crowded and she hardly floated. We had a fine time, however, because everybody had been in the war and had experiences to tell.

HELD IN $300 FOR CARRYING LOADED PISTOL

Timothy F. Dwyer of Middleton Ct., was arraigned in Dedham District Court today on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver. He was held till September 17 in $300.

Mystery surrounds the case, and the police are delving into the gossip behind the arrest. Dwyer was taken into custody at the Norfolk public library. It is said he was waiting there to meet a girl, Emma Mooney, to whom he had been engaged.

The engagement, it is stated, was broken, and Dwyer on July 1 began asking her to meet him. It is supposed she complained to the police. When Dwyer was taken into custody the revolver, it is charged, was found in his pocket.

A box of pills found in Dwyer's pockets was seized. The pills are being tested.

Dwyer told the court he was planning to go West and bought the revolver to take with him.

U. S. GOLF BALL TAX

Proposed by Representative

WILL HIT JOHN D.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—John D. Rockefeller and other golf players will be taxed if the Ways and Means Committee follows a suggestion made today in a letter sent to it by Representative Oglesby, a New York Democrat, and one of the crack golf players of the House. In framing the war tax bill Oglesby recommends that the committee put a tax on golf balls, predicting that about $2,000,000 annually may be raised in this way.

MOURNING FLAG ON ARRIVING WARREN LINER

The Warren line steamer Sachem came into port today with thirty-eight passengers and her flag at half-mast because the president of the line, Wilson Furness, is dead in England.

Mr. and Mrs. William Myers of Boston were in Berlin when war threatened. Mr. Myers said: "We went to Ostend. When we reached Ostend Liege had fallen. Even then—three weeks ago—the English were taking thousands of Belgian refugees across the Channel to Folkestone."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hornbrook of Santa Cruz, Cal., had a harrowing experience. Mr. Hornbrook said: "German mobilization was well under way July 25. We, then in Cologne, were warned to get out; but Mrs. Hornbrook was too ill to be moved. July 31, when she was still sick, the Germans forced us with others to board a train, carried us to within a mile and a half of the Belgian border and there compelled us to alight in the rain. After crossing the border in the rain, soaking wet, we reached a train in Belgium, went to Liege, thence to Antwerp, and Mrs. Hornbrook lay there ill for two weeks."

PROBE CRASH OF NANTASKET BOAT STANDISH

Captain O. G. Haines, inspector of hulls and Andrew J. Savage, inspector of boilers in the steamer inspection service, today began an investigation of the collision between the Nantasket boat Rose Standish and the schooner R. L. Tay last night. They are also investigating the alleged negligence of the Nantasket line boat South Shore to go to the rescue of parties from overturned dories during the squall last Monday. Their report will be turned over to Captain Eugene E. O'Donnell, supervising inspector of the New England district.

Captain Fred L. Dorr of the schooner claims the Rose Standish gave no warning signal. One hundred and twenty-two passengers on the Rose Standish were badly frightened. The only damage to the Nantasket boat was to her steering gear and the passengers were transferred to the Miles Standish. A tug took the Rose Standish to her dock today.

NEW STYLES MAKE HAIR BLEMISHES EMBARRASSING

Society Women Now Remove Superfluous Hair, Since an Absolutely Safe Way Has Been Discovered.

Arain Paris has decreed the open neck and short sleeve dresses, and the fashion is highly embarrassing to women afflicted with unsightly hair growths on neck and arms. They find it humiliating to appear in public at balls, receptions and all social affairs until they learn about El Rado. This liquid hair remover is absolutely infallible in its effect, and is positively harmless. This is proved conclusively by the fact that many physicians use the ingredients in El Rado for exactly the same purpose—hair removing.

El Rado acts instantly. A few drops, a simple application, and the coarsest hair vanishes in a few moments, leaving the skin smooth and velvety, even whiter than before. As an aid to good looks El Rado has no equal. Is there a beauty preparation in the world that can improve one's appearance more than the successful removal of superfluous hair?

The majority of women are troubled with unsightly hair in some form or another. Because most women you see have no unsightly growth now, does not mean that they HAD none. The fortunate ones have learned the secret of El Rado. In general every lady you meet has to use some form of depilatory. Every Rooney back of you are using entirely dissatisfied. It is inconvenient to call at your home. The El Rado Co., New York, Chicago, Toronto, Montreal, Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Stockholm, Sydney, Australia, etc., have El Rado in stock and can supply your needs. Sold at all leading drug and department stores.

MURPHY GOES TO DEFENCE OF CITY CHARTER

John R. Murphy defended the present city charter, and urged that Boston be no longer dominated by the Legislature, speaking today as chairman of the Finance Commission before the Recess Committee which is seeking to standardize city charters. Mr. Murphy said:

"Boston has been long enough held in leading strings by the Legislature. Boston is no longer a child. This city does not need reforming half so much as the adjoining city of Somerville.

"Any common sense charter in which is embodied the principle of town government will be successful. You can't get 100,000 citizens into a town meeting. But you can get the same results by giving the people an advisory initiative and referendum.

"Partisanship is bad in city affairs. I see no reason to change the present Boston charter."

Cock-a-Doodle-Doo! Medford Wars Over Roosters or Sleep

Incensed at their inability to sleep nights owing to noise made by crowing roosters, Medford citizens assembled to the Board of Health, which has announced a public hearing on the matter to be held at the City Hall, September 23. This hearing will determine what action the Board of Health will take.

One long-suffering citizen said today:

"These roosters seem to have no adequate idea of the proper time to crow. Just when people get into a sound sleep, these onerous chanticleers start hurling defies at each other. Their frantic "cock-a-doodle-doos" sound like a beelam. It is a nuisance that menaces the health of the community and should be stopped."

THE LAST SHOT

A Story of War and Love, Told by a World-Famed War Correspondent. The Author Is Now at the Front.

democratic tendencies of the time. On such a Summer afternoon as this, the baron was growing old gracefully, at peace with his enemies.

Centuries older than the speck in the sky was the baron; but the pass road was many more, countless more, centuries older than he. It had been a trail of tribes long before Roman legions won a victory in the pass, which was acclaimed an imperial triumph. To hold the pass was to hold the range. All the blood shed there would make a red river, inundating the plain.

"Inside the old baron, we are parvenus," Marta would say. "And what a pervenu the baron would have been to the Roman aristocrat!"

"Our family is old enough—none older in the province!" Mrs. Galland would reply. "Marta, how your mind does wander! I'd get a headache just contemplating the things you are able to think of in five minutes."

The first Galland had built a house on the land that his king had given him for one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the pass.

Even the tower, raised to the glory of an older family whose descendants, if any survived, were unaware of their lineage, had become known as the Galland tower. The Gallands were rooted in the soil of the frontier; they were used to having war's hot breath blow past their door; they were at home in the language and custom of two peoples. Theirs was a peculiar tradition, which Marta had absorbed with her first breath. Town and plain and range were the first vists of landscape that she had seen; doubtless they would be the last.

REGIMENTAL POST COMMANDER MAKES HIS FAREWELL CALL

One or two afternoons a week Colonel Hedworth Westerling, commander of the regimental post of the Grays on the other side of the white posts, stretched his privilege of crossing the frontier and appeared for tea at the Gallands. It meant a pleasant half-hour breaking a long walk, a relief from garrison surroundings, and in view of the order, received that morning, this was to be a farewell call.

He had found Mrs. Galland an agreeable reflection of an aristocratic past. The daughter had what he declined variously as girlish piquancy. He found it amusing to try to answer her unusual questions; he liked the variety of her inventive mind, with its flashes of downright matter-of-factness.

Not until tea was served did he mention his new assignment; he was going to the general staff at the capital. Mrs. Galland murmured her congratulations in conventional fashion.

Marta's chair was drawn back from the table. She leaned forward in a favorite position of hers when she was intensely interested, with hands clasped over her knee, which her mother always found aggravatingly tomboyish. She had a mass of lustrous black hair and a mouth rather large in repose, but capable of changing curves of emotion. Her large, dark eyes, luminously deep under long lashes, if not the rest of her face, had beauty. Her head was level, the lashes forming a line with her brow now, and her eyes had the still flame of wonder that they had when she was looking all around a thing and through it to find what it meant.

"Some day you will be chief of staff, the head of the Gray army!" she suddenly exclaimed.

Westerling started as if he had been surprised in a secret. Then he flushed slightly.

"Why?" he asked with forced carelessness. "Your reasons? They're more interesting that your prophecy."

"Because you have the will to be," she said without emphasis, in the impersonal revelations of thought. "You want power. You have ambition."

MARTA CRIES OUT AT SIGHT OF SPECK IN THE SKY

He looked the picture of it, with his square jaw, his well-moulded head set close to the shoulders on a sturdy neck, his even teeth showing as his lips parted in an unconscious smile.

"Marta, Marta! She is so explosive," Mrs Galland remarked apologetically to the colonel.

"I asked for her reasons. I brought it on myself—and it is not a bad compliment," he replied. Indeed, he had never received one so thrilling.

His smile, a smile well pleased with itself, remained as Mrs. Galland began to talk of other things, and its lingering satisfaction disappeared only with Marta's cry at sight of the speck in the sky over the Brown range. She was out on the lawn before the others had risen from their seats.

"An aeroplane! Hurry!" she called.

Naturally, the business of war watching for every invention that might serve its ends, was the first patron of flight. Captain Arthur Lanstron, pupil of a pioneer aviator, had been warned by him and by the chief of staff of the Browns, who was looking on, to keep in a circle close to the ground. But he was doing so well that he thought he would try rising a little higher. The smoke of the range shot under him, unfolding a variegated rug of landscape. He dipped the planes slightly, intending to follow the range's descent and again they answered to his desire. The tower loomed before him as suddenly as if it had been shot up out of the earth. He must turn, and quickly, to avoid disaster; he must turn, or he would be across the white posts in the enemy's country.

"Oh!" groaned Marta and Mrs. Galland together.

In an agony of suspense they saw the fragile creation of cloth and bamboo and metal, which had seemed as secure as an albatross riding on the lap of a steady wind, dip far over, of the exhibition, not of the man in the machine.

Marta was thinking of the man who was about to die. She rushed down the terrace steps while, in her going and her agonized prayer, could avert the inevitable. The plane descending, skimmed the garden wall and passed out of sight. She heard a thud, a crackling of braces, a ripping of cloth, but no cry.

Westerling had started after her, exclaiming, "This is a case for first aid!" while Mrs. Galland, taking the steps as fast as she could, brought up in the rear. Through the gate-way in the garden wall could be seen the shoulders of a young officer, a streak of red coursing down his cheek, rising from the wreck. An inarticulate ooh of relief broke from Marta's throat, followed by quick gasps of pain. Captain Arthur Lanstron was looking into the startled eyes of a young girl that seemed to reflect his own emotions at the moment after having shared those he had in the air.

"I flew! I flew clear over the range, at any rate!" he said. "And I'm alive. I managed to hold her on she missed the wall and made an easy bump."

He got one foot free of the wreck and that leg was all right. She shared his elation. Then he found that the other was uninjured, just as she cried in distress:

"Put your hand—oh, your hand!"

His left hand hung limp from the wrist, cut, mashed and bleeding. Its nerves numbed, he had not as yet felt any pain from the injury. Now he regarded it in a kind of awakening state of realization of a deformity to come.

"Self-gathering sarah!" he muttered to himself crossly.

Then, seeing that she had turned white, he thrust the disgusting thing behind his back and twinged with the movement. The pain was arriving.

"It must be bandaged! I have a handkerchief she begged. "I'm not going to faint or anything like that!"

CAMP WOULD BAR COACHES FOR THE SIDELINES AS MOVE TO BETTER GRIDIRON GAMES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

GALLANT ANXIOUS TO MEET BALDWIN IN ANOTHER GO FOR NEW ENGLAND TITLE

HARVARD TEAM TO HOLD WORK BEHIND GATES

The utmost secrecy will surround the Harvard football practice starting the first week in October. The usual star chamber proceedings which are inaugurated annually behind closed gates on the Stadium gridiron will be even more drastic than they ever have been and practically no one but the players and coaches will be allowed behind the Stadium enclosure.

In other years the track men were wont to perform on the track surrounding the Stadium gridiron, but their appearance there has greatly disconcerted Coach Haughton, who claims that his charges cannot give the right kind of attention to their work with outsiders on hand. This year a special track is now being constructed outside the Stadium and the track men will have a place of their own to perform without disturbing their brethren of the gridiron.

So strict has been the rules regarding secret practice at Harvard since the Haughton regime that once when President Lowell entered the gates, one of the attendants was requested to ask him to leave. The attendant refused the assignment and the Harvard leader was undisturbed. Last year Masaharu Anesaki, professor of Japanese literature at Harvard, walked right in to watch the players at their secret work, but he turned around and walked right out again.

Star Cornell Back in First Practice

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Twenty-five candidates reported for Cornell's first football practice of the season. Coach Al Sharpe expects the number to increase daily, as registration and class work does not begin until two weeks.

An important member of the squad is Riddle Hill, star fullback in 1912, who was absent from college last year. Art Gilman, commodore of this year's varsity crew, is a candidate for one of the tackle positions.

School Notes

Over forty candidates reported for first football practice yesterday afternoon at Brighton High. Six members of last year's team are back and with several new men will materially bolster up O'Donnell's efforts another championship team. The schedule:

Sept. 27—Boston College High at Everett.
Oct. 5—Revere High at Everett.
Oct. 10—Dorchester High at Everett.
Oct. 12—Rindge Technical at Everett.
Oct. 17—Wellesley High at Everett.
Oct. 24—Melrose High at Everett (Suburban League).
Oct. 31—Manchester, N. H., High at Everett.
Nov. 7—Brighton High at Allston.
Nov. 14—Medford High at Medford (Suburban League).
Nov. 21—Somerville High at Everett (Suburban League).
Nov. 28—Cambridge Latin at Cambridge (a. m.).
Nov. 28—Lynn English at Fenway Park, p. m.

Coach Hubbard has had a look at the candidates for the Melrose High team and is confident that they will develop into a good fight for the Suburban League title. The schedule follows:

Oct. 3—Somerville at Somerville.
Oct. 5—Revere at Melrose.
Oct. 10—Arlington at Melrose.
Oct. 12—Alumni at Melrose.
Oct. 17—Medford at Melrose.
Oct. 31—Everett at Everett.
Nov. 7—Beaumont at Melrose.
Nov. 14—Revere at Melrose.
Nov. 21—Arlington at Arlington.
Nov. 26—Arlington at Arlington.

The football squad of Boston English High will report for practice today at Franklin Park. Harry Parker, last year's captain, will be unable to play, having been appointed assistant master at English High. Coach Fred O'Donnell, Captain Charles O'Connor and Manager Fred O'Connell.

The Mechanic Arts football squad will not probably start work till next Monday. The candidates for the team will report to Coach Dolan's big mass meeting and Coach Dolan will tell the boys what he expects of them.

Cambridge Latin should have a great football team this year. Many players of last year have returned to school and Coach James O'Brien's coaching system is almost assured.

Forty candidates for the Somerville High football team reported for practice yesterday. Coach Dave Morse is greatly pleased with the material, and expects to put the squad on edge shortly.

A mass meeting is held at the High School of Commerce this afternoon at which a large number of boys will report for football practice. Coach Bowers and Captain William Davis will have charge of the practice. The schedule will be announced later.

The men at Boston Latin will get an early start this year, as Coach Fred O'Brien and Captain Fred O'Brien expects to develop a team that will be the best of Latin High's history. The first game will be played at 3:30 on September 20. The schedule:

September 20—Boston English at Boston Latin.
September 27—Brighton High at Medford.
October 4—Medford High at Newton High at Newton.
October 11—Cambridge Latin at Roxbury Latin.
October 18—Somerville High at Somerville.
October 25—Somerville High at Fenway.
November 1—Revere High at Revere.
November 8—Roxbury Latin at Roxbury.
November 15—Medford High at Medford.
November 22—Mechanic Arts at Fenway, 2:30, English High at Fenway.

Five members of last year's team will return to Latin this fall, one of the five being Captain Coach O'Brien has some fine material to work around, especially Wight at center, Enright at end, Hunt at guard, Murdock at tackle, Captain Fred O'Brien, Harold Martin and Joe Martin in the backfield, are valuable players.

The Lexington High football candidates will report for first practice today or tomorrow. Dr. Irving Fiske of Waltham will coach the team. Captain William Martin has several veterans and the new material is very promising.

Coach E. M. Roberts of the Brockton High football team has just received word from the first men that they will report for the first week and he expects to start the season with the same fighting spirit the Northern Massachusetts team has shown in all of its games. Captain Bill Dwyer is working hard to put speed into the boys.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

I WAS talking with Stallings yesterday morning and remarked that he would have to cut loose with some of his young pitchers that he had been bragging about.

"Yes," replied the Braves' manager, "and I believe that I can show at least one of them who will prove a sensation and help me out a lot from now to the close of the season."

It came to a show down and Stallings delivered the goods in the person of Davis, the former Williams College pitcher, last year with the New York Americans and the Jersey City Club for a brief season. Davis is now a law student at Harvard.

DAVIS walked out to the box for the second game of the double-header and very calmly and nonchalantly pitched a no-hit game against the Phillies, who can slug the ball with any team in the National League.

NO one of the 8,000 spectators believed for a minute that the youngster could accomplish such a rare feat. As the game wore on and not a safe hit was registered off his delivery, the crowd suddenly realized that he was making mockery of the visiting team. Finally when the last batsman was retired on a pop fly to the Boston third baseman, the few spectators broke into cheers and several hundred of them made a rush to the pitcher, who was walking to the dugout, and tried to slap him on the back.

DAVIS works without effort. He relies mainly on the spitball, but he has a good curve ball that proved effective more than once. Not only one stage of the game were the Phillies at all dangerous, and they were dangerous not through any effort of their own, but because Davis temporarily lost control. He issued passes to the first three men that faced him, filling the bases with no one out.

THE situation was decidedly ticklish and Stallings rushed Paul Strand to the bull pen in a hurry to warm up. But before Paul could pitch half a dozen balls to Hinchman, the storm had cleared and Paul was not called upon again to warm up.

With the bases full Davis struck out Paskert on three straight balls and then Cravath, one of the best sluggers in the game, rapped to Maranville for a double play.

The only men to reach first base were five that walked, one that got a life when Smith failed to hold a pop fly close to the pitcher's box, and one that was safe on a wild throw.

Nothing rattled Davis. He pitched one of the coolest games ever recorded.

IT is surely in order to print a summary of the work of Davis against the Philadelphia batters. Here it is:

Lobert — Grounder to Davis, grounder to Smith, grounder to Maranville for a double play.

Becker—Out, fly to Maranville, foul to Schmidt, foul to Gowdy, base on balls.

Moore — Grounder to Evers, grounder to Maranville, grounder to Schmidt. Put to bench.

Hilley—Struck out, struck out, foul to Smith, struck out.

Byrne—Pop fly to Maranville, base on balls, pop fly to Smith, foul to Smith.

Paskert—Base on balls, base on balls, pop fly to Maranville.

Martin — Grounder to Smith, base on balls grounder to Davis.

Burns — Grounder to Smith, struck out, fly to Cather.

Tincup—Grounder to Schmidt, Cravath—Grounder to Maranville for a double play.

Killifer—Grounder to Evers.

Thus we see that only two balls were knocked to the outfield—a fly to Mann and a fly to Cather. Most of the other blows were either weak grounders, mostly pop flies, or fouls.

IT was fortunate that Davis delivered the goods and won his game. His victory enabled the Braves to gain half a notch on the Giants, who lost to Brooklyn, and the Cubs, who lost to Pittsburgh.

Besides, Davis' feat instilled more confidence in Stallings' men. They now know they have a pitcher who can go through for them. Instead of relying on Tyler, James and Rudolph to pitch twice a week regularly, there is now a quartet of first-class twirlers ready to keep up the fight for the pennant.

Also there is Paul Strand, whose friends are sure he will also deliver whenever called upon.

Seven B.A.A. Winners in Worcester Meet

WORCESTER, Sept. 10.—Three firsts, two seconds and two thirds was the record made by the Boston Athletic Association in the New England Fair meet.

Tuber, Power and Johnstone each won their respective events, the mile, 880-yard run and the high jump. Kivlat finished second to Tuber.

Howard Drew, wearing the University of California colors, beat Tom Halpin, the B. A. A. star, to the ribbon by nearly two yards in the hundred, being clocked at 9 4-5s. Morrissey, another B. A. A. runner, was close at Halpin's heels.

Carman Again Wins in 50-Mile Contest

NEW YORK, Sept. 10. — Clarence Carman of Jamaica, L. I., won the fifty-mile international championship at the Brighton Beach motordrome, Bobby Walthour of Atlanta was second and Jimmy Moran of Chelsea, Mass., third. Carman's time was 1 hour 5 minutes 32 1-5 seconds.

Marksmen in Tie.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 10.—With scores of ninety-six out of a possible 100, C. F. Riffle of Kenova, W. Va., and A. R. Cheslik of Portal, N. D., are tied for first honors in the preliminary event of the grand American handicap shoot here and a shoot-off to determine the winner will be held today.

GALLANT WANTS ANOTHER TITLE GO WITH MATTY

By JACK CONWAY.

ALEX McLEAN still believes that Gilbert Gallant is the best lightweight in New England. The manager of the Chelsea youth called at this office today and informed us that he would like to sign Gallant for another bout with Matty Baldwin for the New England title and that he believes that he would breeze in a winner.

Gallant fought "Chick" West at Middletown, Ct., on Labor Day and all but knocked out the Holyoke boxer in a ten-round contest. He knocked him down eight times, which is quite a feat, as West has engaged in forty-one bouts and Gallant is the only boxer who has ever defeated him.

McLean realizes that Baldwin is one of the best boxers of his weight in the East but he contends that Gallant is improving with each tussle and that he is sure to conquer Matty. McLean said:

"Gallant is the only New England lightweight who would have a chance of defeating Baldwin just now. Matty is fighting at a merry clip and it will take a young, strong boxer with a punch to defeat him. Personally I think that Gallant is the boy to turn the trick.

"BALDWIN has already vanquished all of the leading lightweights in his favor in each contest was not a large one. There were many persons who believed that the Chelsea glove wielder was entitled to a draw in each bout. Matty is not as rugged as Gallant but he is a better ring general. This is to be expected, as the Charlestown boy has been earning a livelihood by the power of his fists for over a decade and during this time has met almost all the world's leading lightweights.

"BALDWIN, however, cannot expect to keep winning for ever. He must go back some time and if he meets Gallant again I believe he will win a second best. The Chelsea boy is fighting better right now than he has at any time during his career in the ring. He improves with each bout and within a year's time he will be sweeping all before him.

"GALLANT never fought better in his life than he did against "Chick" West at Middletown, Ct., on Labor Day. He riddled his opponent with slashing jabs and right-hand punches and had a large margin in his favor when hostilities ceased at the end of the tenth frame."

THREE-DAY GOLF TOURNEY AT WOODLAND

A large field of golfers, including some of the best players in the State, put in an appearance at Woodland this morning in the start of the annual three-day Fall tourney.

Three divisions will be drawn for match play after the last score is in tonight, the first flight continuing at scratch for the championship cup and the next two divisions using their state handicaps in the match play of the following two days.

It is expected that Francis Ouimet, fresh from his victory in the Green Mountains where he captured the national amateur title, and his faithful caddy, P. H. Hoyt, will take part in the qualification round and try for the gold medal offered the low scorer.

It is not expected that they will be able to play through, as both think they have had their share of golfing holidays this summer.

Woodland's course was in the pink of condition when the players arrived today and those who are not playing well, or were not among the qualifiers, had only themselves to blame.

Post entries were expected, so that a continual parade of golfers was in evidence from the first tee, from early morning until after 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Pace-Makers Join Riders in Dispute Over Big Bike Title

The dispute regarding the winner of the middle distance motor-paced championship at the Revere cycle track last Saturday evening is spreading and the pacemakers have now entered the controversy.

Walthour insists that he won the race, while his pacemaker says that Carman, who was awarded the title, never passed him, although the official referee and scorer both declare no mistake could have been made.

The new champion says he is more than willing to give his rivals a return race, and also adds that he will bet his end of the purse against the field. Walthour has taken up the offer, while Wiley, the former title-holder, Lawrence and Mitten have also entered the event.

Carman and Walthour have both requested that they have the same pacemakers as used in the championship, and Manager Butler, who will stage the race next Saturday evening, says he will do this if possible.

The men have also agreed to ride for a percentage of the gate and at the request of Manager Butler, who says many were unable to see the title event, owing to the advance in prices, the old scale of admission will hold good.

A long list of amateur and professional events has also been arranged.

ATHLETICS WORRIED OVER ONWARD SWEEP OF RED SOX IN GREAT PENNANT RACE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

BRAVES OUT TO TIGHTEN GRIP ON FIRST POSITION TODAY IN DOUBLE-HEADER WITH PHILLIES

BRAVES HOLD FIRMER GRIP ON THE LEAD

must needs drop two games, while the "Quins" are winning the two they play with the Dodgers.

Winning one game these days seems to be a far more difficult performance for the tottering McGraw minions than taking both ends of double-headers would be for the leaders.

With Alexander out of the way, the Braves bats should rattle merrily out there at the Fenway. With "Dick" and "Lefty" in trim, the Philly sluggers should find the going quite rough.

By gathering both games today while the Giants are being beaten twice the Climbers can stay in front by a three-game margin. While that might be hoping too much, nevertheless it shows just what a fine chance Boston has at present to get out where pursuit will be very difficult.

Yesterday's illustrious performance on the part of "Spitball George" Davis spread a lot of joy in the Brave ranks. It proved that the prospective champions have another pitcher who can be depended on in the fight down to the finish.

Against the hardest hitting team in the league, the youngster showed a brand of twirling that has never been beaten. He was inclined to be a bit wild at times, but in each instance he followed his lapse with a wonderful exhibition of gameness that augurs well for his future.

DAVIS A NEW FIND.

Passing three men in a row and then retiring the side is a stunt worthy of a Mathewson, not at all something to be expected from a raw recruit. Yet the former college star went at his work with evident enjoyment. This, too, despite the fact that the dampness of the field made the day none too good for a moist ball hurler.

Fred Mitchell, who converted Davis to the wet delivery, claimed before the Braves left on their last Western trip, that his pupil would startle the league once he was given a chance.

He has, sure enough. His sterling stunt at this critical point in the race is the best possible thing that could happen to the team. With a lot of doubleheaders ahead, another real pitcher will be a mighty handy asset.

Yesterday gave the Braves stars a chance to work out in typical world's series weather, and while they were getting acclimated in that first dolorous contest, ten thousand or so fans shivered in disgust.

GIANTS MUST BRACE UP.

After the second fray started and the old pep came back stronger than ever, the excitement bubbled up, and every fan in the crowd stuck till the end, waiting for the rare no-hit stunt to be completed.

By the way Marty O'Toole was bottered by the Dodgers, he is no better with the Giants than he was in Pittsburgh. One thing is sure. A brace on the part of the champions is an immediate necessity if they wish to remain in the race. The Cubs are only two games behind them and going strong, though they stumbled yesterday.

The Braves, three and a half game edge on the O'Days, who have had more ups and downs this season than all the other clubs in the league together, look fairly safe just now.

In the first place, most of the Braves' remaining battles are to be fought on the home grounds, while the Chicago crew must do their scrapping on the road most of the time.

Added to this, the Braves have five games more ahead than the Cubs. This fact should favor the Climbers. Another slump now on the part of the Westerners, and they will be out of it for good and all.

TESREAU IS GOING ALONG IN AS GOOD form as any pitcher in the parent league and expects to win his last season. He has won eight of his last ten games. The Cubs have been the victims of the Giant castoff in four times he has faced them.

THE STRONG ST. LOUIS PITCHING staff was not able to hold the Finder pitchers to any great extent in the last series in Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh has been one of the Pirates' best hitting teams of the season, the latter part of the season any other club but Miller Huggins' foes out of last place.

Protest Is Upheld; Houston Loses Flag

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 10.—Failure to play nine innings in the first game of a double-header with Waco, which Houston won, cost Houston the 1914 pennant of the Texas League.

This contest was cut to seven innings by agreement, and Waco's protest that all first games must be nine innings was upheld by Secretary Farrell of the National Commission. As a result Houston and Waco are tied for first place. The season ended yesterday and percentages gave Houston half a game lead.

RED SOX HAVE NEW HOPES OF LANDING FLAG

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—The Red Sox are beginning to see visions of the American League pennant. They figure there is yet time to overhaul the Athletics. Today only seven games separate them from the top. It was not so long ago that the Mackmen had a lead of something like thirteen games.

The Athletics have struck a bad slump, and the Red Sox are to blame. Going into Boston a little over a week ago the Athletics had a lead of 12½ games. Coming out this margin was cut to 5½ games. And now it is down to seven.

It is reasonable to believe that the beating meted out to the Mackmen will have no good effect on the team when it strikes the road for its last trail around the Western circuit, when a team that has been winning right along falls into a losing streak it generally takes a long time in coming out.

With two more games to play with the Athletics it is possible for the Red Sox to cut down the lead to five games. And there isn't a man in the Boston camp who doesn't believe that this can be done. Boston has won the last eight games played with the Mackmen. This is a record against the great Mack machine.

George Foster or Joe Wood will be put in against the Athletics today. Both of these hurlers pitched masterly games against the leaders on their last visit to Boston and it would not be surprising to see one of them repeat today.

Murphy's error of Hooper's fly in the eleventh inning and some weird umpiring by Cahill put Eddie Plank up in the air and the Red Sox beat the Athletics 2 to 0 in yesterday's game.

Plank passed three men and forced in the runs. He had pitched wonderful ball up to this inning. The Athletics rallied in their half but the rally was crabbed by Umpire Connolly. A shower of cushions greeted Connolly after the game.

DOUBLE BILL AGAIN TODAY FOR BRAVE'S

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

With a lead of a game and a half over the Giants as a result of yesterday's battles on the diamond, the Braves will line up against the Phillies in another double-header this afternoon.

The remaining games in the series ought to be easier for our boys. The Phillies have used the one pitcher that the Braves have any fear for. Alexander won his game yesterday and will probably not be heard from again.

Tincup, who pitched four innings yesterday, may be called upon for a comeback before the Phillies leave town, but he has no terrors for Stallings' men. They have knocked him out of the box twice in a week's time, and if he stacks up against them again they will feel confident of sending him to the shower bath.

Stallings will now be able to work his big three—Tyler, James and Rudolph again. It is likely that Tyler and Rudolph will pitch this afternoon, unless the manager decided to allow Paul Strand to go a full game. He worked two rounds of the first game yesterday and allowed only one hit after two were out in the ninth.

The sudden sensational work of Davis will cause Stallings to breathe easier in regard to his pitching staff.

Take it all in all the Braves are now well fortified and after today's double-header there will be a letup of bargain days for awhile, and besides there is the Sunday's rest coming, which will help a lot.

Their Married Life

Winifred Brings Helen and Warren to a Closer Understanding.

HELEN opened her eyes with a vague consciousness that something was different. She was too sleepy for a few seconds to remember and then it all came over her with a flood of memory. Winifred was home!

The long trip and the short time they had been with her mother seemed already like a dream. The only thing that she remembered with any distinctness was the fact that Warren had seemed so different. He had been graver, very courteous of her, and yet altogether lacking in tenderness of any kind.

While they had been in Cleveland she had not noticed it so much, but now that she began to think back, this attitude had begun before they had left. Could it be possible that Warren was still thinking of that absurd incident concerning J. Woods Atkinson?

It amused Helen to think of a day passing without any of the little bickerings and disagreements that Warren was sure to indulge in when he was entirely himself.

She tiptoed into the next room. Winifred was lying in the middle of the large brass bed of the guest room, her tawny little head half buried in the pillow and her small white arms flung high. Her cheeks were faintly flushed and she was breathing regularly. There was no trace save in the half-parted lips of a shadow of anything that ailed the child, and Helen thought with a pang of the hospital where Warren insisted that the operation must be performed. Even her mother had laughed at the idea of worrying about it, but Helen dreaded it just the same, and of late Warren had neglected to pooh-pooh the idea. Perhaps he hated it just as much as she did, but men are always different about showing their feelings.

Winifred turned over at this point and Helen sat down on the edge of the bed to be closer to her. How wonderful it was to have her back, and with a sudden remembrance of yesterday Helen got up softly and went over to the chair where Winifred's clothes were piled.

SHE BEGINS TO PLAN NEW CLOTHES FOR WINIFRED

Of late her grandmother had been making little dresses, probably because she loved to sew for the child, and although great care had been taken, the clothes were not the kind that Winifred had worn before she had gone West. There was a severity about them, an absence of childishness, that Helen hated to see and longed to remedy. Already her thoughts were jumping wildly ahead, and she was planning rapturously a dainty wardrobe of sheer little Mother Hubbard dresses, made a full inch above the knee, and leaving a good expanse of dimpled little legs clads in socks and black strap slippers.

What fun it would be to shop for a small girl and there were plenty of things that she could make herself so as to save expense. How little time and trouble she would begrudge and how willingly she would spend up anything for this small daughter who was so very dear to her.

Helen curled up on the bed again, with her feet tucked under her, and with one of Winifred's warm little hands in hers, gave herself up to day dreaming. The only thing that would need to happen to make everything perfect was Warren's approval of her ideas. Together they could do so much more, while if Warren continued to treat her coldly as he had of late, all the pleasure of thinking and planning would be dimmed for her.

Unconsciously she had bent over Winifred and was watching her closely when a movement in the room suddenly roused her from her thoughts, and with a start she slipped to her feet, dropping the hand she had held on the counterpane.

Warren with a bath robe thrown around him and his hair all rumpled up, stood by the side of the bed looking at her gravely with a look in his eyes that she had never remembered seeing before.

She smiled faintly as he whispered:

"Anything the matter?" and shook her head vigorously at the idea of such a thing.

WARREN TRIES TO SET HELEN'S FEARS AT REST

"Isn't she a darling, though, Warren, and isn't it wonderful to have her back?"

Warren had pulled up a chair close to the bed. "Shall I put the window down?" he whispered. And as mechanically as Helen herself could have moved, he moved over to the other side of the room and noiselessly closed the window and pulled up the shade a very little. Then he came back and sat down in the chair.

"You're not worrying about her now, are you?" With a return of his reassuring manner, which somehow comforted Helen even while it did very little toward entirely quieting her fears.

Hlen nodded. "I'm afraid I am, dear; I guess I'm not so very brave myself, but I could stand it a lot better if I could have it done for her."

"Don't be foolish," said Warren gruffly, although Helen suspected a great deal of tenderness was hidden under the brusque speech. "You'll be surprised when you find out how little it all amounts to. It isn't so if she hadn't plenty of strength."

"But, Warren, you know that Winifred has never been at all strong!"

"That's because you have always been only too glad to imagine her delicate. You women foster weakness in children!"

Helen was about to protest indignantly, but something checked her. Surely this was no time for argument.

"She'll be running around just like any other healthy child after this is over." Warren went on, hardly noticing that Helen had not replied to his remark. "You know a thing like this always affects more than one faculty in a child. I remember that Bob was operated on for adenoids when he was about six."

"WON'T IT BE FUN TO SEE HER GROW UP?"

"Really, dear?" a picture of Bob in his sturdy six feet of manhood rising before her. "And you're sure her ears is all right?"

"Certainly; didn't the doctors say so? What's the use of worrying yourself all up about it, anyway?"

There was silence between them for a few minutes, during which time Nora began to make preparations for breakfast.

"Won't it be fun to watch her grow up?" said Helen, suddenly, too impressed with her idea to care whether Warren would agree with her or not.

"She'll be going to school in a couple of years," said Warren, voicing his thoughts. "No teaching her at home; I want her to have plenty of chance to expand."

"Don't you think she could expand at home?" said Helen indignantly.

"I don't want her to be a mollycoddle if she is a girl," went on Warren, "and children should be together. You'll have plenty of time to influence her after school."

The temptation to keep Winifred with her as long as possible had been one of Helen's pet ideas. She had hoped to postpone school until the child was eight anyway, and now Warren was insisting upon having Winifred start in at an early age.

Winifred stirred suddenly, and then opened her eyes wide and looked up at Helen, who bent over her quickly. Then she sat up in bed and rubbed her fists into her eyes, but catching sight of Warren she smiled a sleepy smile and held out her arms.

Warren reached across and picked her up gently, and across the child he looked up at Helen and their eyes met.

Helen caught her breath with a little sob of understanding as Warren's other arm slipped around her shoulders. After all Winifred belonged to both of them.

Ralph Burns Tom's Letter in Dramatic Fashion

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLVIII.

"CONSTANCE must not be disturbed," Mrs. Hale had said to her husband and daughter when she summoned them to breakfast that morning. The maids were warned to "make no noise for fear of waking Miss Constance, who was not well." The aunts each thought seemed to be for her niece's physical comfort. Yet, when the morning meal was over and the family were alone together after the waitress had left the dining room, the wife said decidedly: "Now, John, I want to know what all this mystery and disturbance mean."

"I want you to know," her husband replied promptly. "I shall not go to town before 11 o'clock. I wish you and Edith to come with me into the library for a serious talk."

As soon as the trio were seated in the library the matter of the home imparted to the shocked women by Mrs. Hale was the cause of the catastrophe, this distress sank into insignificance compared with the grief and pained incredulity when they learned of what her husband and daughter accused her niece. Edith added her bit of information to the effect that Ralph had come back last night to meet Tom and had, with what she termed his "wonderful insight," guessed at once that Constance had gone to meet his cousin.

"And you see he was right," the girl insisted, a gleam of triumph in her eyes. "He could not stay until your return, father, for his mother was ill—in spite of your assertions to the contrary. I asked him if Peter had not said that his mother needed him, and I reported to him what Mrs. Morton's maid had told you—and he said that the girl had told you that because his mother did not want anyone to know she was worse.

"Edward Dayton must have been mistaken in thinking that he met Ralph walking, for Ralph was in the car and had just been down to the village to get something from the drug store for his mother."

ACCUSED OF DECEIT

"That is all beside the question!" said Mr. Hale irritably. "What is of infinitely more importance than what Ralph did or said last night is the fact that circumstantial evidence shows that Constance has deceived us."

Of course, Mrs. Hale protested that she "did not believe it," and that "it could not be true," but at last, after hearing all the evidence, was compelled to acknowledge that she "simply could not understand it."

"My only hope," said her husband, "is that Constance may explain some seemingly inexplicable things and deny the charges against her."

"If she is innocent she will deny them," said Edith judicially—but I fear she cannot.

Meanwhile Ralph Morton had received his morning's mail and with it the letter from Tom Morton, written yesterday afternoon, demanding that he come into town to see him.

His face paled as he read it, for he had not slept well last night and was nervous this morning. A sudden idea occurred to him. He would stop at his fiance's home on his way to the station. He told his mother a hasty goodby—congratulating her upon looking so well this morning, and felt no pangs of conscience for having lied about her condition last night.

He had a part to act, and he must act it well. He rehearsed it mentally on his brisk walk to the Hale home, where the maid ushered him into the library. As he wished to have his stage-setting correct, he glanced eagerly at the open hearth. He knew that it was Mrs. Hale's custom to have a fire lighted here each morning, even after Spring had arrived. Today was unusually cool for this time of year, and the logs were blazing merrily.

"Good morning," he said to the group gathered here, then, without further preamble, turned quickly to his host. "You found Constance, didn't you?" he said, with apparent anxiety. "Edith telephoned a guarded message to me to that effect last night. I confess that, since the receipt of this letter from Tom just now, I am surprised to know that she returned."

He drew Tom's envelope from his pocket and held it so that each person present recognized Tom Morton's bold chirography. "And did Tom come too?" he asked abruptly.

"No," said Mr. Hale; "he"——

CONTINUES FALSE PART

"Ah, I thought not!" Ralph interrupted him. "When I read this I was sure of it. But how did their plans miscarry—his and Constance's, I mean, so that she came back last night instead of"——

He stopped as if catching himself on the verge of the admission of some shameful secret. "I would like to know," he added more cautiously, coming closer to Mr. Hale and dropping his voice, "what message Tom sent you to account for his absence. I must know before I show you his letter."

Mr. Hale spoke sternly, with no effort to soften what might be a blow to the cousin of the injured man. "He sent no message, Ralph," he said. "He could not—for he had a bad accident. He is fearfully hurt—is in the hospital—he may die."

The pallor that swept over Ralph Morton's face was not the result of acting. The words "may die" staggered him. But he did not forget the role he had laid out for himself.

"Accident!" he gasped. "Tom—hurt—Tom—in the hospital! Oh, why didn't you send for me? Why didn't you let me know?"

"What would have been the use?" Mr. Hale replied more kindly. "You could have done nothing. He was in competent hands."

The young man stood for a moment as if stunned. Then he looked at the letter he still held. John Hale, seeing the look, held out his hand.

"Let me see that letter," he demanded. "You were going to show it to me."

But Ralph drew back. "Oh, no!" he exclaimed. "I can't now! Oh, poor Tom!"

Mr. Hale moved impatiently. "Tom's accident has not altered his character," he declared. "If there is anything in that letter than I—he hesitated—"that I, as Miss Medford's uncle, should know—I have a right to see it."

Before anyone present could guess his intention, Ralph stepped quickly to the open fireplace and dropped the letter into the heart of the leaping flames. As John Hale, with an exclamation of dismay, sprang forward to snatch at the blazing paper, the young man laid a strong hand upon his arm.

"Don't sir!" he said sternly. "Tom is hurt—he may die—nobody must ever know what was in that letter."

How to Keep the Head Clean

Frequent washing with a shampoo composed of pure soap, cocoanut oil, glycerin, white of eggs and salicylic acid imparts a feeling of cleanliness and invigoration that is hard to describe. This opens up the pores leading to the hair roots, removes dandruff and scales, and puts the scalp in such a healthy condition that the loss of hair is naturally stopped.

Birt's Head Wash is made of the above ingredients. It contains no free alkali, as is the case with some soaps and shampoos.

It contains no alcohol, which is one of the principal ingredients in many so-called hair remedies. Free alkali is deadly in its effects, and alcohol may turn the hair gray.

Be on the safe side. Use Birt's Head Wash.

HOPE OF PEACE HAS EFFECT IN MONEY MARTS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Sentiment was more cheerful today than for weeks, the belief prevailing that the foreign exchange situation will become normal before long and that foreign buying in this country will soon extend beyond food supplies. There is little doubt but that monetary matters are in a decidedly more encouraging state. The opinion prevails that the war will be of far shorter duration than was feared.

Conferences by bankers and Reserve Board members at Washington have tended to restore confidence. While the date for reopening stock exchanges is uncertain, war reports this week have diminished somewhat fear of wholesale liquidation by foreigners when trading is resumed.

Bankers remain in a decidedly conservative mood, however. There is belief that relief for American railroads is almost of much importance as restoration of peace.

The cotton situation is still serious, but it is a good sign that cotton prices should become firmer in the South.

At Chicago today wheat prices opened from ¾ to 1¾ cents lower, but quickly recovered and rose about 3 cents from the low because of reports that foreigners had placed large export orders. The volume of trading increased. Corn and oats were lower. Provisions advanced.

MAY NOT FORM GOLD POOL.

There is some doubt that it will be necessary to form a banking syndicate to underwrite a gold pool of $150,000,000 to insure the payment of American obligations to Europe. It is understood that data furnished a clearing house committee shows that the total of indebtedness to be smaller than was expected. New York bankers have arranged to raise $100,000,000 to pay the foreign indebtedness of that city. This has rendered the situation much less acute.

If the pool is formed it will be with the assistance of some of the largest banks outside of New York and the first call will not be for more than $25,000,000. It is stated in Washington that the Federal Reserve Board will probably approve of the pool, it is deemed necessary.

Much is being said about the value of its moral effect in Europe. It is argued that if Americans are willing to pay in gold foreigners will be less insistent upon having what is owed them here liquidated in that form. But in regard to the pool it is likely that no more will be done until the opinion of London is obtained.

BANKERS IN CONFERENCE.

J. P. Morgan is in Washington to confer today with the committee appointed by the Reserve Board to consider foreign exchange ways and means. It is believed that the gold pool question will be a chief topic of the discussion. The rise yesterday in exchange rates was attributed to heavy buying by the banking syndicate which is floating New York city 6 per cent. notes. Experts estimate that buying of grain bills totalled $1,000,000. So far this week $1,250,000 in gold has been shipped to Ottawa.

LONDON MORE CHEERFUL.

London is taking a more cheerful view of the war and of the money situation, it is cabled to Hearst newspapers. Bankers there now have a better comprehension of the foreign exchange problem.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

For the last fiscal year Norfolk & Western gross earnings touched the high record of $44,203,373, but as operating expenses increased $1,370,028 net operating revenue shrank $639,330. However, the road added $1,141,984 to its surplus, which now totals $12,565,090.

Representatives of the British government have asked American manufacturers to bid upon $1,500,000 army blankets.

It is understood that the first war loan of Germany will be for $250,000,000 and bear 5 per cent.

Latest sales of copper were at 12½ cents a pound, thirty days and for nearby shipment.

August production of Braden copper was 4,532,000 and of Miami 1,907,000 pounds. Braden made a high record, but Miami production decreased more than 1,000,000 ponds.

The Iron Age reports that August pig iron production was 1,995,261 tons, or 64,363 a day against 63,150 for July.

The Bank of England's proportion of reserve to liabilities is 19.81 per cent., compared with 60.54 for the corresponding time a year ago. Its public and private deposits and bullion have all decreased a little within a week.

Should Greece be drawn into the European war, the Kissel Motor Car Company will have the distinction of being the first American manufacturer to supply a fleet of motor trucks for use in the greatest war of the world's history.

His Excellency, Agamemnon Schliemann, Grecian minister to the United States, has placed his official signature on an order for fifty one-and-a-half-ton Kissel Kar trucks, to be delivered in New York for transit to Greece the middle of September. The Kissel factory has put on an extra force of men to fulfill its contract.

Referring to automobile accidents, which he credits with having aroused the public safety movement, Coroner Hoffman of Chicago says: "The number of automobile fatalities is but little more than the deaths which for years have been caused by horse vehicles, less than half the number killed by street cars, one-fourth the steam railway fatalities, one-sixth the number of suicides and one-fiftyfourth of the premature deaths from all causes in Cook County in 1912. Automobile accidents occupied tenth place in both 1912 and 1913.

Threatened litigation by the Splitdorf Electrical Company of Newark, N. J., to protect its patent rights covering the method of attaching a magneto to an automobile, particularly in regard to the Ford type of machine, has been brought to a head by the filing of a bill of complaint against the Eisemann Magneto Company for infringement of patents issued July 7, 1914.

According to the complaint filed the type of magneto mounting used by the Eisemann Company is an infringement of the patent issued to Ernest W. Brackett of the engineering department of the Splitdorf Electrical Company, and assigned to the company. The usual injunction, damages and costs are asked.

FORBES SEES IN WAR REAL LIFE LESSON

By B. C. FORBES.

You have done some serious mental stock-taking since the bottom fell out of European civilization, have you not?

Did you read how the erstwhile ribald French youths hurried to church before starting for the front and proudly boasted that they had done so.

And you have read almost daily of late how serious and sober all the capitals and other large cities of Europe have become.

War, the destroyer, at least begets thought. It makes us take our bearings afresh. It forces questions and questionings to our mind. It flashes before us stern realities. It produces sensations akin to those experienced by the citizens of San Francisco when the earth began to give way and open up under their feet.

Dropping into a "show" for half an hour the other evening while yet full of the day's business perplexities, I could not resist ruminating as I watched a troupe of dancers come to the front one by one, go through energetic gyrations and step back out of sight—I could not, I say, resist comparing their performances with life itself.

Do we not each step upon the stage, go through a little stunt, win as much recognition as we can, and then move out of sight?

The dancers' exhibition lasted a few moments, and then the curtain fell. Ours lasts a few years—and then the curtain falls.

In these agonizing days the curtain is being rung down prematurely on thousands of fresh, vigorous lives every hour.

The awful drama causes soul-stirrings such as no stage could stimulate.

There is a tendency, a temptation, to cry out in disgust and despair: "What's the use? Is anything worth bothering about? Is it not all too puny and fleeting to be taken seriously?"

I talked with a banker yesterday. Our conversation turned to the herculean efforts put forward day and night by another banker to keep the situation on an even keel all through these recent stormy days. And though this man has aided the government as well as the financial community, more perhaps than any other individual in the country, his reward at the hands of Administration heads has been nothing but animosity. (Some day I may tell the whole story in specific detail.) "It's mighty disheartening," commented my friend. Yet there has been not the slightest let-up in the ceaseless, well-directed activities of the financier.

"Only the inward consciousness that you are doing something worth doing for your fellowmen can buoy you up through it all," is what this man once said to me when I questioned him upon the subject. "It's not money—I don't need it. It's not so much recognition, either—I have had more than a fair share of it. It's the 'well done' that you get from yourself when you know that you have done all that in you lies, and done it in the right spirit and with a right motive."

And it seems to me that that, too, sums up life.

Punch, the most famous of all witty periodicals, in reply to the question: "Is life worth living?" once replied: "It all depends upon the liver."

Substitute "motive" for the last word, and I think you have the basically true answer.

If our motive be right, if we labor less for self than for others, if we give out a little more than we expect or even hope to get in, then, if things do go wrong, if the earth begins to creak and tremble under our feet, if the bullets begin to whistle round our heads in the service of our country, there is no disposition to wail childishly, to whine despairingly, to rail against man and curse his maker. We are prepared to play the game uncomplainingly, with a stiff upper lip and a heart not hardened.

WHY Are the Nations Fighting?

Why Is "European Civilization Committing Hari-Kari on the Doorstep of Asia"? Can Any Man Give A REASON?

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

Two boys fighting in the street, two dogs fighting in the gutter, two men brawling in a drinking saloon have SOME slight cause for fighting. The boys have quarreled over a game, the dogs dislike each other's look, the men in a saloon are drunk and have quarreled.

The child, the dog and the drunkard fighting we can understand. And they can give SOME KIND of a reason.

But who can understand the civilization of Europe fighting against civilization, and what REASON CAN ANY MAN GIVE?

An intelligent man discussing the war said: "The question in mind is not who will win, when will the war end, or anything of that kind, but WHY ARE THEY FIGHTING? I defy any man to give any reason why fifteen million men with guns, cannon, sabres and bayonets are slaughtering each other."

That indeed is the question, WHY IS CIVILIZATION DELIBERATELY COMMITTING SUICIDE? Without a reason, a just or even an unjust cause, all of the people proud of their intelligence, all the slowly accumulated civilization of Western Europe is plunged in disastrous war, and Asia, the age-long menace to Europe and to civilization, looks on like some hyena watching two higher animals slaughtering each other and waiting for the easy prey, or the carcass.

In a recent signed article Mr. Hearst asked:

"What good will it do England and France and Belgium to weaken Germany and Austria, and thereby weaken their first and chief protection against the invading hordes of Asia?

"What good will it do Germany and Austria to weaken France and Belgium and England, whose aid and whose utmost strength they may at any time need to support themselves in their mighty task of repelling Oriental assault?

"Why should Europe decimate its forces and destroy its own power, when at any time its whole force and its full power and its united effort may be needed in a supreme struggle to rescue the civilization of Europe from submersion in an overwhelming flood of barbarism?"

Of the great nations engaged in committing suicide not one can profit, NO MATTER WHAT MAY HAPPEN.

If Germany succeeds in ruining England, France and Russia, Germany and Austria must suffer.

If the Allies win they must suffer.

Together living as friends and brothers, carrying on the work of civilization, of science and of education so well begun with this century, they might have reached the noblest heights before the century is closed.

Who would have dreamed as the century opened that after fourteen years Asia would look on in cynical scorn at the sight that Europe presents today?

The citizen of the United States sympathizes with Europe, her suffering and her danger.

That citizen sympathizes also with his own country and realizes the fact that he is not exempt from danger and serious personal interest.

In the article quoted Mr. Hearst says:

"Furthermore, America is almost as much concerned as Europe in the menace of Asia. We do not come into immediate contact with it in the East as the countries of Europe do, but we are coming into closer and closer contact and eventual and inevitable conflict with it on our West.

"For reasons of selfish interest, as well as of human interest, therefore, it is America's duty to exert its utmost influence to conserve and unite under the banners of peace and progress the forces of civilization.

"Let us raise our voice so loudly, and exercise our influence so strongly, that Europe will be compelled to stop for a moment and to listen to the voice of reason, to the appeal of humanity, to consider for a moment not merely our interests but their own interests, the interests of all civilization, the best interests of the whole human race.

"Peace upon terms honorable to all can be secured, and the wealth and the power and the legions of Europe preserved and reserved for a greater purpose—not for the destruction of civilization, but for its sure protection in the crises to come."

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

42.1 per cent. of the manufacturing establishments in the United States employing 500 or more people are located in New England? And that New England is foremost in the production of textiles, boots and shoes, leather, jewelry, silverware, plated ware, firearms, ammunition, cutlery, confectionery, chocolate, fine paper, textile machinery, shoe machinery, rubber goods, fine watches, hosiery, silk goods, brass goods, bronze goods, wire goods, clocks, foundry and machine shop products?

The Lesson of Matrimony

How One Woman Treats With Success the Party of the Other Part

By DOROTHY DIX

"THE sight of a jarring, bickering, middle-aged husband and wife is always a shocking one to me," said the woman philosopher, "not only because it is the outward and visible sign of a marriage that has been a failure, but because it shows that either the husband or wife, or both of them, have been too stupid to learn the lesson of matrimony.

"Now my husband and I get along in peace and amity. There's never a ripple in our domesticity, and this halcyon state of affairs, which is so much admired by our friends, is because I have had intelligence enough to learn certain fundamental facts about my husband and to neatly sidestep them.

"Most wives who desire to do their duty by their husbands spend their time cooking up good things for them to eat and ministering to their personal comfort. That's good as far as it goes; but, believe me, a wife is better employed studying her husband's mental peculiarities than she is in ministering to his physical comfort.

"What has matrimony taught me? For myself, lots of things—patience, self-control; not to think once, but a dozen times, before I speak; the ability to walk among dangerous subjects with the deftness of a sword dancer, and a diplomacy that would entitle me to an Ambassador Extraordinary Minister Plenipotentiary to any court in Europe, if merit got its just reward.

Party of the Other Part

"But I was speaking more particularly of the party of the other part, and the knowledge that I have acquired enables me now to avoid the domestic spats that filled my early married life with heartaches and tears.

"I have learned, for instance, that it is never safe for a wife to originate an idea that doesn't strictly concern her clothes or the cooking. That is, she must never put forward her plans as her own. And above all, if they turn out well she must never claim them.

"If she has set her mind on doing any particular thing, the way to do it is to gently insinuate the idea to her husband, to plant the seed, so to speak, in his mind, and then later on she can come back and enjoy herself sitting under the shade of the tree that has sprung up from her humble efforts.

"Now if I were to say to my husband that I had a fine design for a new porch, or that I wanted to send Tom off to college, he would raise ten thousand objections, every one of which would be final, and there'd be no porch, or Tom would not go to college. But I casually discourse about porches and leave designs of them lying around the house, or I mention that some other boy is going to college, and get a few college catalogues sent in to my husband, and then some fine day he electrifies me by telling me that he has decided to build a porch, or send Tom off to college, and I needn't say a word against it, because his mind is made up on the subject.

"I have also learned that it is fatal to advise your husband, that is, in a way in which you would advise anybody else and which he will recognize as advice. There's nothing that riles the average man as much as having his wife tell him what she thinks he ought to do. It almost invariably makes him fly off at a tangent and do exactly the opposite thing to show her that he won't be bossed by her.

Hard Lesson to Learn

"Probably there is no other lesson that a woman learns that is as hard as shutting her teeth on her opinions concerning a matter in which she is vitally interested, and not proffering a few suggestions in the matter. But it pays, for in the end her husband, who would have scorned her advice, will condescend to talk the subject over with her, and then she can administer her advice in sugar-coated pills that he swallows without knowing what he is taking.

"Another thing that I have learned is never to correct my husband. Oh, I used to do it. I had better educational advantages than my husband had, and I've had more time to read and am better informed than he is, and I used to consider it my sacred duty to set him right when he made some preposterous statement, or got his facts all mixed up.

"But not now. If he says that black is white, or that Michael Angelo discovered America, I smile serenely and let it go at that. For what is historical accuracy or mere facts compared with peace in the family!

"Finally, I have learned not to say, 'I told you so,' when my husband makes blunders. I proffer my opinion as tactfully as I can on a matter under discussion. If he goes against my judgment and comes a cropper, I do not remind him that I warned him against it. The subject is a closed incident in our house, and is never referred to again. What's the use? Recriminations don't undo what is done. They only stir up strife and hard feelings.

"These are a few of the lessons of matrimony that I have learned that enable me to get along harmoniously with my husband, and it's what makes me say that any woman by the time she is forty years old should have arrived at a perfect working knowledge of how to deal with a husband's idiosyncrasies."

The Crimson Banner of War

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

RED is the sun in the blazing sky,
Red are the cliffs as they lift on high,
Up to the fortress where bright flags fly.

Up in the fortress the black guns wait
Ready to belch forth a blazing fate—
In black of powder and red of hate.

Grim troops mass 'neath the sheer red wall—
Ten thousand men—for a pennon small,
Hostile and insolent, waves o'er all.

Red sinks the sun in the glowing west
Blood stained the cliffs and the torn earth's breast
Where thousands writhe in their last unrest.

Still on the fortress that flag floats high,
Stark 'neath their banner her own sons lie—
And the red cliffs point to the crimson sky.

But over the cliffs and the fields of dead,
Over the flag on the fortress head,
On high gleams the sunset with banner spread—
One Flag of Destruction stained in red.
